

The Practical Application of Diversity: Why It Is Important and What Can It Do For Me

Dr. Orlando Taylor

Vice Provost for Research & Dean of the Graduate School
Howard University

Friday, April 3, 2009

3:15 PM - 4:15 PM

Natural Sciences 1 Room 1114

Dr. Orlando L. Taylor is currently Vice Provost for Research and Dean of the School at Howard University. He has held many other positions at Howard, including Dean of its School of Communication and Interim Vice President for Academic Affairs.

Dr. Taylor is a national leader in graduate education and within his discipline.

He is currently or has served previously as a member of numerous national boards, including the Board of Directors of the Council of Graduate Schools (CGS), for which he served as Board Chair in 2001. He is also a Past President of the Northeastern Association of Graduate Schools and the National Communication Association. He is a former member of the Advisory Committee of the Directorate for Education and Human Resources of the National Science Foundation and of the Advisory Council at the National Institutes of Health. He is also the former president of the Consortium of Social Science Associations and a current member of the Board of Trustees of the University Corporation for Atmospheric Research and the Oak Ridge Associated Universities Board of Directors. He chairs the National Advisory Board for the Center for the Integration of Research, Teaching and Learning, a major NSF-funded center at the University of Wisconsin.

As Graduate Dean at Howard University since 1993, Vice Provost Taylor has played a significant role in assuring Howard's continued national leadership in graduate education. Howard, a richly diverse institution, produces more African American on-campus Ph.D. recipients than any research university in the United States. Vice Provost Taylor is a leader in several national initiatives involving graduate education. He has been a particularly vigorous advocate and spokesperson on topics and issues relating to access and equity in higher education.

Dr. Taylor received his bachelor's degree from Hampton University, master's degree from Indiana University, and Ph.D. degree from the University of Michigan.

For additional information please contact migarcia@uci.edu

Co-sponsored by UCI AGEP and the Center for Graduate and Professional Students and Postdoctoral Scholars